His mighty life was burned away By Carolina's flery sun; The pestilence that walks by day Smote him before his course seemed run.

The Constellations of the sky,
The Pleisdes, the Southern Cross,
Looked sadly down to see him die,
To see a nation weep his loss.

"Send him to us," the stare might cry—
"You do not feet his worth below:
Your petly great men do not try
The measure of his mind to know. Not mid your puny jealoustee: You sacrificed him in your race Of envies, strifes and policies.

His eye could pierce our vast expanse, His exr could hear our morning songs, His mind, smid our mystic dance, Could follow all our myrisd throngs.

Bend him to us! no martyr's soul, No here slain in righteous wars, to raptured saint could e'er control A holier welcome from the stars."

of vessels navigating the river, after they shall have given proof that they are inwinity and But once he turned from you to try ployed.

That once was when his country's call Said danger to her flag was nigh, And then her banner's stars dimmed all The radiant lights which gammed the sky. Take him, leved orbs! His country's life, Preedom for all—tor these he wars; For these he welcomed bloody strile, And followed in the wake of Mars!

The Late Typhoon in China.

The following particulars are extracted from a letter written by a merchant in Canton to his wife in London:

"I intended to write you last Sunday, but the day was very differently spent. It was one which will long be remembered here. In the early morning it was dull, with a fresh breeze blowing, and we thought we were going to have a nice cool day. After breakfast, there being no ann, we went on the Red Fort to get the air. After being there a little time, we noticed that the wind Ireshened; but gain beginning to fail, we were obliged to reain beginning to fail, we were obliged to retime, we noticed that the wind Ireahench; but rain beginning to fall, we were obliged to re-turn to the house. The wind still increased and the river got quite rough. We were watching the boats flying by before wind and tide, when the wind began to blow with fury, and we saw one bout pass by bottom up-wards. We had scarcely time to notice this, the wind every moment getting more furious, when the matting flew off the houses like pa-ner shavings, and the tiles seemed to flutter when the matting flew off the houses like paper shavings, and the tiles seemed to flutter about like sparks; the rain was swept along, and the river itself like duat, and then in rapid succession, dished by junks, thower-boats, cargo-boats, every kind of boat, but all perfect wrecks, most of them bottom-up, some on their side, dashing against each other, and either sinking or being heaped up in one consused pile on shore. Then came floating by a long line of wreck nearly a mile long—spars, fused pile on shore. Then came floating by a long line of wreck nearly a mile long—spars, timbers, tops of boats, disabled boats, many with people still on board, but very many more without one still living of the late occu-

"The river rose rapidly until it overflowed into the houses, and in some of the streets was three or four feet deep; the rain all the time descending in torrents, and the wind raging as if it were mad. This continued for about an hour and a half, when it suddenly fell quite calm, and the sun appeared. This did not last long. The wind in an instant sprang up from another quarter, and blew with greater fury than ever. The wind being now against the tide, the river appeared like a sea, the waves dashing over the wrecks and Is not a mixture or manufactared article, but is pure from the pide of the Fortugal Sambuous grate cultivated in New Jersey, proconneeded by Chemicia and Physicians as possessing medical properties superior to any other Winesia uses, and as accolent article for all weak and debilitated persons and the ages and infirm, improving the appetite and benefiting ladies and children.

Become it will not intextcate as other wines, as it contains no mixture or spirits or other liquors, and is siduited for its trich, peculiar flavor, and nutrities properties, imparting a healthy tone to the dispessive properties, imparting a healthy tone to the dispessive organs, and a blooming, soft, and healthy skin and complexion.

WE REFER TO Trees, some with roots bigger by far than our drawing rooms, and more than 300 years old, were rooted up like carrots. But sadder still was the frightful loss of ife. It is estimated to be over 20,000, and I fear there is no exaggeration in this. In one house, nearly opposite to us, one hundred and twenty people were killed by its falling. Hundreds were drowned by the tide rising to their own houses and preventing their escaps Sixty war wanks had anchored about half a mile from us a few days before; these were new and fully manned and on their way to the North. Of these junks only ten are left, and these perfect wrecks, and upwards of 500 of their crew have periabed. The mandarins, immediately after the tycoon, issued procla-mations offering one dollar for any body brought to them, in order that it might be claimed by relatives—or if not, buried There were seven stations appointed, where the bodies were to be brought; at one only, in less than twenty-four hours, 1,200 were brought; and within three days, upwards of 6,000.

If this occurred at one place, you can im agine that the estimate of the loss is not overdrawn. Dozens of boats must have gone down immediately, with every soul on board; and until the wrecks break up, the bodies will not escape. The sights we have had the last few days are very dreadful. At Whampoa the destruction of property and loss of lives have been equally great. Baurhoo town and New destruction of property and loss of lives have been equally great. Baurioo town and New town are entirely destroyed, nearly every soul in them must have perished. Ships in dock are overturned; many are stranded. One steamer is now quietly lying in the midst of a paddy field, and a chop-boat is driven more than a mile from the river. This may seem incredible. The consul read to me the official report, and it stated these facts, which I also heard from others. The river rose ten lest higher than it has ever been known to feet higher than it has ever been known to reach in the highest spring-tides, and it was impossible to distinguish where the river's With the fury of the wind, this wide expanse of water became like a sea, driving all before it. It was thus that the boat was left far from the river when the water subsided. before it. It was thus that the boat was left far from the river when the water subsided.

The official report quoted an expression of the consul's boatman to abow the loss of life; it was, that "the bodies were as plentiful as shrimps." As American missionary was shrimps." As American missionary was killed by the falling of his house, and four Europeans in the Whampoa custom-house were drowned. With these exceptions, foreigners have escaped with merely a good deal of discomfort; their houses have been knocked about, and many have been drenched by the rain. My bed-room was like a sieve; the water poured in in every direction, as if from a water-spout. I expected every moment that the roof would be lifted off, but it was not; we were a good deal sheltered by the other houses.—London Atheneum.

Death of Gen. Mitchell. The country will hear of the death of this eminent man with deep sorrow and regret. Prominent as a man of science and as a general, he carried into both science and war the unappeasable activity and resources of an ardent and originating mind. Great things were hoped of his administration of the Department of the South, and had he lived, he would have become a important ment in the case. would have borne an important part in the work of crushing the rebellion. We extract from the Advertiser the following account of his life:

Ormsby Macknight Mitchell was born In Union County, Kentucky, Aug. 28, 1810. At

At this age he be came clerk in a store in Miami, Ohio, and afterwards removed to Lebanon, where he had been educated. There he received a cadet's warrant, and earned the money that took him to West Point, which place he reached with a knapsack on his back and 25 cents in his pocket, in June, 1825. He was graduated in 1829, and for two years thereafter was assistant professor of mathematics. From 1832 to 1834 he was counsellor-at-law in Cincinnati; from 1834 to 1844, professor of mathematics, philosophy and astronomy at Cincinnati College; in 1836 and 1837, chief éngineer of the Little Miami Railroad; and in 1841, a member of the board of visitors of the Military Academy. In 1845 he proposed the establishment of an observatory in Cincinnati, and the proposition having been carried on the became a director of the institution. The principal instrument in this institution is the great refractor, equatorially mounted, and made in Munich, and which cost $10,000.

In 1859 Gen. M. became director of the Dudley Observatory in Albany, retaining at the same time his connection with that in Cincinnati. As a popular lecturer on astronomy Gen. M. was particularly eminent, and he is scarcely less distinguished for his mechanical skill, by the aid of which he has perfected a great variety of astronomical apparatus, the most important of which is that at Albany, for recording right ascensions and declinations by electro-magnetic aid, to within 1-1000th of a second of time, and for the measurement with great accuracy of large differences of declination, such as the ordinary method cannot with great accuracy of large differences of declination, such as the ordinary method cannot

He made several discoveries of great scientific importance, some of which were the result of Prof. M.'s remeasurement of Prof. W. Struve's double stars south of the equator, a work to which he devoted much or his time.

tor, a work to which he devoted much of his time.

He began, in July, 1846, the first astronomical periodical in the United States, entitled "The Sidered Messanger," which was abandoned for want of patronage. As an author be has produced a treatise on algebra, a popular astronomy, a collection of earlier public lectures published under the name of "Planetary and Stellar World," &c. But the peaceful pursuit of scientific study was the peaceful pursuit of scientific study was abandoned at the moment when the country called for true men to aid in its preservation. Gen. Mitchell was made a brigadier general of volunteers on the 9th of August, 1861, and or volunteers on the 9th of August, 1861, and was subsequently promoted to a major generalship in the volunteer army. His career in the West is familiar to our readers, as well as the later circumstances of his assignment to South Carolina, where he had laid the foundation of a successful campaign—Boston Termscript.

Miscellaneous Items. A new volcano has appeared in Iceland. From the cold summer it has been impossible to cross the Sprengisandre and the Vatna Vokul: but the flames were quite discernable; and with a glass the stream of lava could be seen crossing the show on the acclivities of the mountains. At last accounts expeditions were preparing to start to view this phenomenon more closely, as soon as the weather permitted.

It is stated that the defences of Corinth are being strangthened on an extended scale. Over one bundred buildings in the line of the fortifications now completed have been appraised and torn down. The seminary building is now used as a hospital, but will probably be destroyed, since it is in the range of our gun.

A SHORT RETORY. A few days ago General Harding, who has lately arrived at Nashville from Mackinaw, called upon General Negley, for protection papers, saying that his beautiful farm and houses were almost destroyed, and that he desired protection from further injury, believing that he had paid the penalty for his folly. "You are mistaken, Mr. Harding," rejoiced the General; "the penalty for treason is death!" — Reening Post, An extraordinary balloon ascension is gray ly proposed in England.
